

Accountants

An accountant should be more than a simple tax preparer. You need their advice and guidance in steering your business now and in the upcoming year. Accountants may offer advice on the legal form most appropriate to starting up a business. In addition they may advise on related legal and taxation issues, business plans for presentation to banks, and what you should expect when starting up a business. This document includes basic guidelines and questions that you may want to consider when conducting your search, as well as resources for referrals.

Lawyers

You have a great business idea. Now, you need an experienced business lawyer on your side. In today's constantly changing business environment, having an experienced business lawyer on your side can give you a significant competitive advantage. Starting a business requires careful planning and foresight. You should consult an experienced attorney when forming your business as there are numerous factors that you will need to consider when selecting the type of entity that is most appropriate for you. This document includes basic guidelines and questions that you may want to consider when conducting your search, as well as resources for referrals, including pro bono and reduced-cost lawyers.

Source: New York City Business Solutions